

The Grasslands of British Columbia is a comprehensive report describing the variety of grasslands found in each region of the province. Prepared for the Grasslands Conservation Council of British Columbia, it is the culmination of many years of research, mapping, and fieldwork, and is beautifully illustrated with pictures from across the province.

This beautifully illustrated report begins with a broad introduction to the grasslands of North America and British Columbia. The introduction describes grassland ecology, the distribution of grasslands, and the factors that affect grassland formation and development. The remainder of the report provides a thorough depiction of grassland types and associated ecosystems for each region, as well as the distinguishing plants and animals for that region. The report concludes with a general review and status of grassland classification in British Columbia.

The Grasslands Conservation Council of British Columbia is proud to present this important document.
